Providing Unique Performance Opportunities

New World School of the Arts Theater Division's production provides deeply innovative, highly rigorous, and pedagogically rich performance opportunities for our students.

It gives the talented students of the high school and college conservatory programs the chance to collaborate and apply their learning from the classroom and studio to one-of-a-kind projects, roles, and experiences.

Creating alongside award-winning working professional faculty and guest-artists, NWSA Theater students tell stories onstage that open minds, reach hearts, challenge the status quo, innovate ideas and processes, build and enrich community, and that embody the idea of creating a New World.

Student Experiences

The size of our department is so small, that the need for camaraderie and the ability to build a strong relationship amongst ourselves. We have such strong ensemble building that leads to productions not being laborious, but fun and collaborative.

After four years of dedication to the work, we take our senior showcase trip to New York City. The location of Times Square, the Ripley Grier Studios, the chance to meet industry professionals and see Broadway shows! It was another huge reason I chose to attend New World, because it is truly the opportunity of a lifetime.

New World has given me not only the training I need to succeed in the theatre industry, but also the professionalism. Overall, this school has taught me how to be a working professional who is collaborative and respectful. The training at NWSA is incredibly valuable because most if not all the professors are still working artists, so the students have first-hand insight on what is currently out there and how the industry is moving.

Being in such a rigorous show brings us all up as performers. The amount of ensemble work required in this musical brought us all closer and taught us how to work more as a machine and less as individuals. The material of this show is not the simplest to sell and the only way to perform it truthfully is by using all the skills we have learned in the classroom! It has been such a pleasure to close out the year with such an incredible production.
